

It is estimated that over 600,000 ethnic Azerbaijanis fled the region as a result of the First Nagorno-Karabakh War, being forced to live in squalor refugee camps across Azerbaijan. While some Armenians were also displaced, we must note that it was primarily Azerbaijanis who were forced to leave when Armenia gained control of the region. This historical context is important to our approach with Nagorno-Karabakh because we must uphold Azerbaijan's territorial integrity over the Nagorno-Karabakh region. However,